Cabaldon and Montemayor will head City Council

West Sacramento's city council unanimously elected a new mayor and vice mayor at the "changing of the guard" meeting last Wednesday.

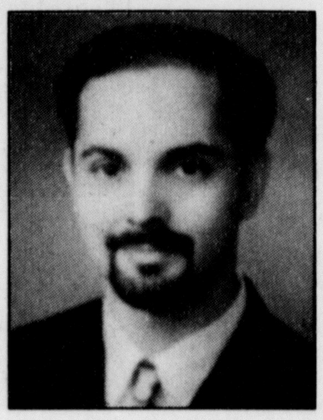

Christopher Cabaldon, a councilman since 1996 who was the top vote-getter in this month's council election, was moved up from his post as mayor pro tem (vice mayor) into a one year term as the city's mayor. The motion was made by Greg Potnick and seconded by Mark Montemayor.

For the new mayor pro tem, the council chose Mark Montemayor, who was also elected in 1996 but does not face re-election until 2000. The motion to appoint him was made by Bill Kristoff, with a second from Greg Potnick.

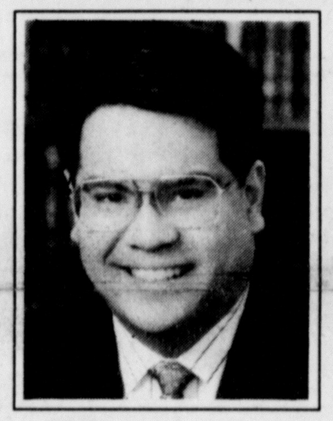

Cabaldon is vice chancellor of the state's community college system. Montemayor is a local health care administrator.

The city's previous mayor was Wes Beers, who placed third among four council candidates in this month's ballot and did not earn a new term. Beers had served since 1990 on the council.

New city councilman Jim Cahill took his seat at the same meeting. Cahill was sworn in after the council scheduled a joint session with the local school board (but before the council's regular agenda). Because of that timing, and because Beers did not attend the meeting, only a four-person city council met with the school board.

Artist and students team up to create mural at Golden State Middle School

By Daryl Fisher
Features Editor

This past September, Golden State Middle School art teacher Jodee Hartney finally got the good news she had been impatiently waiting for months to receive.

"We were notified by the California Arts Council that the grant we had submitted for almost $10,000 in matching funds to create a multicultural mural on the campus of Golden State Middle School had been accepted," said Ms. Hartney. "Believe me, it was very exciting news, and it's a huge shot in the arm for the arts program at Golden State."

The grant was a collaborative effort and artist Juanishi Orosco, a well-known muralist who has done impressive works in such places as downtown Sacramento, Del Paso Heights, Fairfield High School and McClatchy High School, will be the professional artist who oversees the project.

"Juanishi is a wonderful artist," said local resident Louisa Vessell, who coordinates state and local partnerships for the California Arts Council, "and his work is very highly thought of throughout the state. He has worked with numerous organizations, including Health and Human Services and the Oak Park Community Center, to mention just two, and he has been the artist in residency on any number of outstanding murals."

The creation of the mural, which will take approximately five months to complete, will be mostly the work of Golden State Middle School 7th and 8th grade art students.

"The students will do almost all of the painting," explained Mr. Orosco, "and it will be their images which will find their way into the mural. It will be done in separate steps which the students will learn as they go along. Most of the actual work will begin in January and student input will be vital to design and composition."

"One of the many goals of the project," said Ms. Hartney, "is to use community resources to help bring public and private awareness to the need for meaningful arts programs in our schools. The arts greatly affect learning and countless studies have shown that a well-balanced education requires exposure to them. Working on the mural will require our students to plan, think, create and work together in a cooperative effort, and the end result will be something they can be very proud of. Not only will it celebrate their backgrounds and diversity, it will teach them about choices and move them down the road to becoming free-thinking adults."

The grant was the first of its kind to be received by a school in this area, and Ms. Hartney said that there are many people to thank.

"To begin with," said Ms. Hartney, "the school board, district administrators, and Golden State administrators and teachers have all been supportive of the project from the beginning and that has been very helpful. Our students and their parents are excited, too, and it's really hard to overstate how happy we all are to have received the grant."

"It should be a really fun project," said Mr. Orosco. "I've always liked to draw big, ever since I can remember, and murals allow you to do that. I think the young artists of Golden State Middle School are going to have the time of their lives."

Church & volunteers plan holiday meal

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

No place to go for a meal on Thanksgiving?

Think again. An unofficial group of "friends of the West Sacramento Resource Center," a local church and other sponsors has come together to provide a free holiday meal to any local people who need it. Volunteers will serve a Thanksgiving Day meal from noon to 2 on Thursday at Yolo High School, 930 Westacre Rd.

Reservations are not needed. The First Southern Baptist Church, led by deacon Chester Hackney, is helping to organize the feast.

"The community, the homeless, and other people who can't afford a Thanksgiving dinner are invited," reported Mary Vasquez, a "friend of the Resource Center."

Among the sponsors donating food and supplies are Safeway, Bryte Way Market, Crest Jewelers, Nor Cal Beverage, the Canned Food Outlet, MacFrugal's and other donors.

"We're short of brown sugar and butter," said Vasquez, "but we've got people looking for a few pounds."

Higgins Rd. project loses bid to exchange commercial land

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A split vote from the West Sacramento City Council last week left the proposed Pheasant Hollow subdivision in Southport saddled with an eight acre commercial site it doesn't want. Developer Lewis Homes still has entitlements to build 93 homes at the northwest corner of Jefferson Blvd. and Higgins Road, but was denied permission to convert its eight-acre commercial site to 50 more residential units.

Voting in favor of allowing Lewis Homes to change the commercial site to a residential one were city council members Bill Kristoff and Mark Montemayor. Opposing the change were colleagues Christopher Cabaldon,

Stop signs planned for Park Blvd. at 15th

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

The city will install a set of stop signs and a mid-road pedestrian island at the intersection of Park Blvd. and 15th Street/Westacre Road, after the City Council debated last week how best to combat longstanding traffic problems involving the intersection -- and on Park Blvd. in general.

The four-lane road, over a mile long from its base near U.S. 50 to its terminus at Stone Blvd., has long invited speeding over the 25 m.p.h. limits.

Mayor Christopher Cabaldon joined vice mayor Mark Montemayor and councilman Jim Cahill in supporting the stop sign placement.

"I saw it as a safety concern and neighborhood concern," said Montemayor. "I do agree with practically all the council that the long term solution to Park Blvd. is to redesign it, but that's years away and it's going to cost a lot of money we don't yet have. Even though this is a 'band-aid' solution, it's a solution the neighbors have identified."

Council members Bill Kristoff and Greg Potnick voted against the stop signs.

"It wasn't really a 'no' vote on the stop signs," said Kristoff. "I just wanted to carry it a step further, like doing something with Park Blvd. It's not only a traffic concern, but an economic concern. I'm hoping to take Park Blvd. to a two-lane street, with bike lanes on both sides and a median down the center."

Kristoff added that stifling Park Blvd.'s use as a high-speed arterial road would help preserve both the homes along it as well as the neighborhoods on adjoining streets. A local assessment district might be necessary to fund the changes, he said.

"We need to get together and talk to our neighbors and ask if they would be willing to support an assessment district, and find out how much it would cost, how long it would last, and how the whole funding thing would work," Kristoff added.

The city has long considered narrowing the road and adding a median in order to slow down the traffic on Park. It has even considered turning the street into a dead end inaccessible from Stone Blvd.

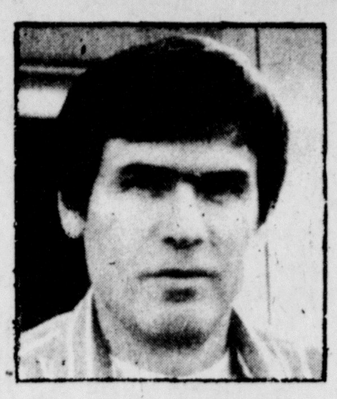

City planning director Steve Patek said that increasing traffic on Park Blvd. has made it more difficult for people crossing it at 15th St. (to the east) and Westacre Rd. (across the street from 15th, on the west).

"Both lanes of Park Blvd. are getting enough traffic that people are experiencing delays getting across it," Patek said. "If traffic volumes continue to grow, ultimately you would need to go to a traffic signal there."

The costs of the planned signs, pavement markings and raised pedestrian refuge islands are estimated at roughly $7,100.

What do dogs think about the subject of bathing?

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

Weekends are for many things. They are for getting away from one's job, or for going to the movies, or for visiting with friends, or for having a relaxing meal at a fancy restaurant with the family. Sometimes weekends are even used for getting out of town, or for just catching up on reading, or for doing nothing more than sitting in front of a television set watching endless football games. But in my case, I have long been assigned a weekend task from which there is no rest, no escape -- bathing the dog.

"That dog of yours (he is always my dog when he needs a bath) is beginning to smell again," my wife will start reminding me towards the end of each week.

"But I don't smell anything," I always reply.

"Just trust me," answers my wife, who I admit has a much more developed sense of smell than I do, "he reeks!"

It's not that I don't like giving Mikey (the family cocker spaniel) his weekly bath, although I usually end up getting wetter than he does, but he absolutely hates the darn thing, and I always end up feeling like I've traumatized him. When I mention this to my wife, she simply says, "I love Mikey, too, but if he wants to be an indoor dog, he has to have a weekly bath. I don't want the whole house smelling like a dirty dog. It's not too much to ask."

When I remind her that Mikey simply refuses to be an outdoor dog (he scratches at the back screen and cries pitifully if he's left outside for more than five minutes) my wife reminds me that I was the one who agreed to keep the dog clean if she agreed to let him sleep and roam freely throughout her house. "But if you would just give Mikey one bath and see how much he hates it," I said to my wife last weekend, "then I'm sure you wouldn't insist on him having one every week."

"I am not bathing the dog, Daryl."

"But why not."

"You know why. We've discussed it a hundred times. It requires scrubbing his butt, among other things, and I will never, I repeat, never, do that!"

Mikey's bathing routine is always the same. To begin with, he somehow knows exactly when it's his bath time, and he immediately goes off and hides. If he hears me say the word 'bath', his eyes grow wide with fear, so I've taken to spelling out the letters, rather than using the 'B' word in his presence. Anyway, when I finally find him, he will be under something (a bed, a table, sheets and covers, etc.). Then he makes himself into dead weight and forces me drag him out into the open. Once I have him in my arms, he begins to shiver and look up at me with the saddest eyes, seemingly asking me why in the world I would want to keep doing this terrible thing to him.

Over the years, I think I've come to better understand Mikey's point of view. For him, bad smells are simply a way of life. In fact, they are his life! I mean, when I take him out for some exercise, I'm convinced that he judges the success or failure or his walk strictly by the odors he encounters along the way. He sniffs everything, and the grosser the smell, the more he seems to enjoy himself. In his world, it must seem the height of stupidity for a human being to insist on continually scrubbing away all the wonderful odors he has worked so hard to collect on his skin and fur throughout the week.

Mikey really works at getting smelly, too. He has very furry feet, and they collect just about every dust bunny imaginable. He also likes to endlessly roll around in wet grass (and mud) whenever he gets the chance, and he makes sure to do it when no one is looking, to avoid any possibility of a two-bath week. And he has long, floppy cocker spaniel ears, and when he drinks out of the toilet, which is another one of the joys of his life, they always end up getting wet with God only knows what.

"That's all very good and well, Daryl," said my wife when I explained all of this to her the other day and tried as best I could to make her understand the very complex way in which Mikey views his weekly bath, "but you seem to be forgetting something."

"And what is that, dear?" I asked, very pleased that she had taken the time to listen to me explain in great detail what I believe to be irreparable psychological damage being done to Mikey by unrealistic bathing demands.

Holiday Home Safety

The holiday season has arrived, a time for decorations and sharing the comforts of a warm home with the ones you love. But things could all go up in smoke if one does not think safety first.

- Heating equipment is the leading cause of residential fires during winter months. Use only approved heating equipment that meets local fire and building codes.
- Have your chimney inspected and cleaned by a professional. Chemical build-up in chimneys can cause fires if not properly removed.
- Burn only seasoned wood; never burn paper or pine boughs, which can float out the chimney and ignite a roof.
- Be careful when burning candles. Keep them away from decorations and other combustible materials.
- Don't leave kids unattended in a room with lit candles.
- Never use candles to decorate Christmas trees.
- When decorating with lights, purchase only those with testing laboratory labels. Replace frayed or damaged cords. Never put electrical lights on a metal Christmas tree.
- For outside decorations, only use lights labeled for outdoor use.
- Don't overload electrical outlets, and always unplug holiday lights before leaving home or going to sleep.
- Install smoke detectors on every level of the home and test them monthly.
- Have an escape plan for the whole family. Set up a meeting place outside your home.

With the city of West Sacramento's Green Waste program, residents can conveniently recycle their Christmas trees, by cutting them into four foot sections, then leaving at the curbside on their regular garbage collection day.

The 49ers (8-3) spotted New Orleans 10 points in the first quarter, then turned on the Young aerial attack to whip the Saints 31-20. Steve Young, who threw for four touchdowns, kept the 49ers in the hunt for a wild card spot.

The 49ers' victory clinched at least a wild-card spot for the Minnesota Vikings. Minnesota (10-1) beat the Green Bay Packers for the second time this season (28-14) and are starting to look like the team to beat in the NFC. I hope the 49ers are paying attention to the Vikings' game plans!

Don't be surprised if the Packers and 49ers meet in the first wild-card playoff game!

The Atlanta Falcons (9-2), who had to come from behind to beat the Bears 20-13, are still leading the Western Division by one game over the Niners. Next week, the 49ers will host the New York Giants on Monday Night Football.

The Raiders (7-4) gave the undefeated Broncos a little scare last Sunday in Denver. The Raiders trailed the Broncos 17-14 in the third quarter before the roof caved in on them. The Broncos ended up beating the Raiders 40-17 to extend their unblemished record to 11-0. The Raiders are still in good shape for their playoff run with the Washington Redskins (2-9) coming into town next Sunday (1 p.m.) The game is not sold out, so don't expect to see it on TV.

Last week I lost two games, (49ers -12 and Packers +3) bringing my season total to 18 wins, 14 losses and 1 tie. (Press time was early Monday, so my Monday night pick - Miami +3 will count in next week's totals).

In week 13, take the Jets (-7 1/2) over the Panthers and Miami (-8) over the Saints. On Monday night, I like the 49ers (12 1/2) to cover the spread over the Giants.

Are you ready for the River City Rumble? That's what ESPN is calling the fight featuring Willie Jorrin and Jesse Magana on Friday, December 18. OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Idea of 'small' school bond might be a winner

Plans for a new school bond measure took a new twist last week, as members of a school district planning committee decided to consider a different approach to the one they had been looking at for most of the '90s.

Instead of asking West Sacramento voters for $50 million or more to build a new high school and to revamp the current one into a new middle school, they wondered if a better short-term answer is to launch a school bond without plans for a new high school.

In other words, what they talked about was asking the public to pass a much smaller bond -- one of perhaps $5 million to $10 million -- and to use the proceeds to fix and remodel current facilities. The new bond measure might bring air conditioning to schools that don't have it, for example, or add new restrooms or cafeteria space at the high school.

This approach is promising. It is perhaps the only reasonable option open to the district, since West Sacramento residents have twice turned down large "new high school" school bonds this decade and have given the district little reason to believe they will change their minds if asked a third time.

With the new approach, the Washington Unified School District would not get what it really wants. It could, however, get some of what it really needs. Residential growth is poised to begin, and current facilities (especially at River City High School) just aren't up to the task of teaching the new kids who will soon begin trickling in to the district. A limited school bond to help the schools "make do" may be the best choice West Sacramentans will fund.

Meanwhile, successful handling of this "interim" bond measure, and careful use of the funds to improve local schools, could help lay the groundwork for a more ambitious effort in several years. Perhaps, in five or six years, the city will be ready, willing and able to build a new high school. A small bond measure for remodelling existing facilities might get the city and the district to that point.

Of course, there are important questions to answer before deciding if this strategy is sound.

Will a limited bond measure, for upgrading existing schools only, be valuable enough to the students to justify itself? What can be done to improve and expand the current facilities, and how much would it cost to do these things?

How much would such a bond measure cost individual local landowners, and how would that compare to the costs of a more ambitious school bond? Would the difference make it much more likely for a small bond measure to succeed than a large one?

Directly or indirectly, the district's bond considerations affect everyone living in or doing business in West Sacramento, and members of the public would be wise to stay involved as the plot thickens.

Letters to the Editor

Good articles!

I would like to commend the News-Ledger, and writer Daryl Fisher in particular, for your series of feature articles (i.e. last week's Chuck and Billie Robinson/Jack Byrnes articles) recognizing some of West Sacramento's finest citizens.

Our city is blessed with a rich heritage and cultural history. The fact that you have made an effort to recognize these worthy individuals warms my heart. As a proud member of this community, I salute you.

Naming the team

As a 71-year resident of West Sacramento and an 87-year resident of the Sacramento area, and a big fan of the Solons (minor league baseball team) years back, I would like to suggest a name to the ballteam that will be coming to the area -- a name that will give recognition to both sides of the river:

"Solons West."

Solons West, playing at Raley Field, don't sound bad.

Now, while I am at it, I take issue with the News-Ledger referring to West Sacramento as River City. Please, don't give away the identity of our great city.

I have read your paper since 1927, when it was called the Yolo Independent and Filzgead was the editor. I especially enjoy the "Pages from the Past" and local news.

Editor's comments:

Thank you very much for writing and for your feedback on the paper.

A couple of people have wondered why we used the term "River City" in conjunction with the baseball team articles in recent months. Actually, "River City Baseball" is the name of the group trying to bring a team to West Sacramento. We have merely repeated their name in articles about them.

At other times, of course, we use the name "River City" when reporting on the activities of River City High School -- again, only in the service of accuracy.

Bus shelter suggestions

At our November 18 joint meeting of our West Sacramento City Council/Washington Unified School District we witnessed several important events, including: 1) The swearing into office newly elected Councilman Jim Cahill and re-elected Councilman Christopher Cabaldon, with the latter being elected Mayor and Councilman Mark Montemayor was elected Mayor Pro Tem for the next year by unanimous vote of City Council members; 2) A spirit of what should be money-saving general agreement via joint use of facilities for our future; 3) Future 4-way stop signs at Park Blvd./Westacre Road/15th Street; and 4) Announcement of 6 new bus shelters, including: a) A larger one at Triangle Court/500 Jefferson Blvd., with some special protection from the south wind/rain/hot sun; b) West Capitol Ave. at Sycamore Ave.; c) Reed Ave. at I-80 on-off ramp; d) Stillwater Road; e) 5th St., north of C St.; and f) 5th St., south of C St.

So while all shelters are "called for" at this time, City Staff believes more will be made available as the need occurs. Continuing with YoloBus, printed info and YoloBus staff lead this writer/rider to believe that by winter, not only will YoloBuses once again be using the underpass west of 5th Street, but it sounds like the local #40 and #41 will no longer go directly in and out of downtown Sacramento, but riders will probably transfer to/from #42 in front of (say) our new City Hall at Merkley and West Capitol Ave., which seems to make sense. But rather than have traditional bus shelters there, why not have the plans for our new City Hall include that transit-friendly element, with its own shade and protection from rain for not just bus riders, but other rider and a few extra benches (?) Also, it would sure help a lot during those heavy wind/rains if those shelters on the north side of West Capitol Ave. (facing south) were simply reversed, thus not only providing the same quality protection as the shelters across the street -- already facing north. Such changes would also provide shade during very hot days! So let's break with tradition and apply some common sense: those who doubt or object need only have a seat at those shelters during the heavy wind/rain and note how much better the protection is across the street...

And while another proposed change to the Pheasant Hollow Development was rejected after long preparation and emotional debate from nearby residents, an element seems to missing: Mutual discussions rather (only) long debates prior to official presentations.

Impeachment thoughts

A few questions regarding the impeachment process we're undergoing. What if you replace Bill Clinton's name with Janet Reno's, and replaced the White House with the Justice Building? What if it was Reno that was accused of some form of sexual harassment and lied about it under oath, not once, but twice? Suppose she vehemently and publicly denied it? Then, adding insult to injury, she lied about it to other government officials knowing that they would make false statements to the press, in the hope that those statements would pollute the jury pool, and deceive the public at large. What if she had a pattern of similar behavior, and a coterie of associates and supporters willing to bribe, intimidate, or take whatever action necessary to suppress evidence? Would the American public, and all of their representatives, both elected and anointed (i.e., the press) clamor for her removal from office? (After all, its only about sex, and she's perceived to be "doing a good job".) I wonder.

Thanksgiving meal issues

Thanksgiving has a strange sound this year. The sounds of sighs rather than the ring of gobble gobble. Chester Hackney, who works with the First Southern Baptist Church to provide a food closet for the low-income families each week, was going to sponsor a Thanksgiving Dinner for the community at Yolo High facilities. All the good would be donated through food coalitions and personal donations and the help was going to be donated by qualified personnel, since it was for a worthy cause.

All was well until last week. Although the Community Facilities Act provides for the use of public facilities without charge, because tax dollars pay for them. Mr. Sweeney of the WUSD decided that he wanted to charge for the event. The Principal of the school, the food services Director, the all needed signatures had been given a wavier. Chester is head of food services at the Church and Subs as a janitor for the school district. So, his time and others would be provided to take care of the facilities.

Why would Mr. Sweeney of WUSD change things so that the event would not be able to get in the newspapers for those in need to know about? The Thanksgiving Dinner is allowed by law and all the provisions had been met. Nothing was costing the WUSD except the lights. The law provides for that amount to be absorbed into budgets. Now, other than it being something that Mr. Sweeney thinks is unnecessary, since he is not without at this time of year, or he personally does not like Chester Hackney, (as Chester has been making waves with administration lately) or he does not like the poor and needy who will come to this dinner. Whatever the reason, he is unjustified. HE is hardly community minded. He made sure that he was unavailable for Dr. Kelleher to question after changing the demands for the event.

The charges to provide the community with this dinner would be over $500. An amount Chester certainly does not have. An amount that is not needed nor asked for by law. But, in this city, you seem to be treated unfairly and unethically if you have made waves. If you wish for someone to know about this dinner, call WUSD at 375-7600 and ask where it will be scheduled. Either at Yolo High School (if they come to their senses) or at the First Southern Baptist Church in West Sacramento (Michigan and Maple, 371-2111) on Thanksgiving Day at 12 to 4 p.m.

DON'T BE BAMBOOZLED.

West Sacramento does have one locally owned paper.

It has one that isn't part of a corporate chain.

And it has one that has been serving you for over three decades.

But it's not that one.

The News-Ledger. There's a difference you can measure – that's why we're still your hometown newspaper!

State grant pumps up city business loan fund

West Sacramento's revolving business loan fund has received a $337,872 grant from the state Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD). The grant is intended to recapitalize the business loan program operated by the city.

Small and medium-sized businesses may apply for the funding, which is to be matched dollar-for-dollar with company equity or private loans. A 1997 HCD grant of $300,000 helped launch the program.

For information about the loan program, call Michael Luken, Economic Development Specialist II for the City of West Sacramento, at 373-5843.

WUSD adds controls on phone use

The school board of the Washington Unified School District is scheduled to formalize changes to policy in the use of official credit cards, official cell phones and per diem meal rates at its Dec. 8 meeting.

Several staff members and school board members currently have access to district credit cards and cellular phones.

New language in district policy would call for "strong internal controls," "checks and balances" and a certification by the Board of Trustees that "a particular type of expenditure serves a public purpose" in handling such payments for goods and services.

New language for the credit cards calls for their authorized use only "when the primary process of purchasing goods and services through purchase requisitions and purchase orders is not a viable option."

A new policy for pager and cell phone use authorizes the district to provide them to employees for conducting district businesses, and calls for the employees to reimburse the district for any charges beyond $5.00 per month resulting from non-district use. The district did not previously have a written policy on use of cell phones and pagers.

'Yolo Singles' offers social life —

Yolo Singles has served singles of Davis, Woodland, Sacramento, West Sacramento, Dixon, Winters and other nearby communities in Yolo, Solano, and Sacramento counties for some twenty years. The organization's purpose is to provide group social and recreational opportunities for single persons. Activities during a typical month include potlucks, parties, TGIFs, and recreational and cultural outings. Members range in age from thirty-something to sixty-something.

One of the organization's ongoing programs is Conversation and Growth, twice-monthly meetings in the homes of members. These meetings often feature a guest speaker on topics relevant to single life; they may be open forums, free-ranging living-room talk sessions that provide opportunities to share ideas or feelings on issues of concern to single adults. New friendships evolve, independence is enhanced, and mutual support is generated when singles meet others who have experienced and dealt with the challenges of a single lifestyle.

Conversation and Growth meetings are open to all singles, members and nonmembers, at no cost.

All single adults are welcome to attend an event and are encouraged to join. There are no restrictions. Yolo Singles is a nonprofit organization and annual dues are kept to the minimum necessary to cover the cost of publishing a monthly calendar of events that is mailed to members. Treasury surpluses that accumulate are spent on special events such as champagne parties and catered holiday dinners.

To join, send a check for $15, payable to Yolo Singles, to John Bowden, 2428 El Chico Circle, Rancho Cordova, CA. 95670. For information, call (530) 758-2348, (530) 668-8590, or (916) 361-8786.

HAPPY THANKSGIVING!

Livestock housing at shelter —

From The Yolo County's Sheriff-Coroner's Office

Yolo County's Sheriff Bart Simpson is announcing a ribbon cutting ceremony for the Yolo County Sheriff's Department Animal Services Shelter's new livestock housing facility. It is scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 24 at 11 a.m. The facility is east of the animal shelter which is located at 41831 Gibson Road in Woodland.

While the barn and paddock runs are still a "project at work," it is ready to house impounded livestock. The facility project has been two years in the making, and badly needed by Animal Services to shelter the many types of livestock. The existing one stall barn constructed in the '70s is no longer adequate. The increased numbers and varieties of animals housed by Animal Services often require special long term care.

The Yolo County Sheriff's Department welcomes all interested County employees and members of the community to join us in celebrating our accomplishment.

Greg Potnick and Jim Cahill. The motion to drop the commercial site failed 3-2.

"I voted 'no' on the land use issue," explained Potnick yesterday. "An eight acre site would never provide a huge mall, but it would provide shopping opportunities such as a decent size market. And there would be those who would say that if we lost that site, we would have to add it somewhere else, and I think we originally planned it there because that was the most appropriate site."

City staff had supported the change, as did Kristoff and Montemayor.

"(Lewis homes) felt the commercial site wasn't marketable, and with (Bryan) Turner and everybody else owning a large commercial property right across the street, this really makes it not feasible," said Kristoff. "I thought the developer had done a pretty good job of putting together a package -- they had acquiesced on sidewalk issues, they had put in a park and a park trail through the development, and agreed to a wall so people on Jefferson Blvd. didn't have to look at fences. They increased landscape and those kinds of things."

Potnick said that the proposed density of the suggested new housing -- over six homes per acre -- may have been a factor in the rejection, as well.

"A couple of the council members who voted 'no' with me indicated they might consider it in a more positive light if the density were lowered," he commented.

Both Kristoff and Potnick said they expected to see further negotiation with Lewis Homes and perhaps a modified proposal.

Roasting the Holiday Turkey

The Physics Behind the Feast

By Rod Grant, Ph.D.

Thanksgiving – the annual celebration of family, friends, food, and ... physics? Sure! You don't need to be a scientist to understand the wonders of physics – you just need to think about how to roast the perfect turkey. As a physicist who loves to cook, I find the physics behind the annual Thanksgiving feast fascinating.

To understand one aspect of cooking, you need to understand the principle of heat conductivity. As we all know, when food is cooked in a conventional oven or over an open fire, the food cooks from the outside-in. Cooking requires that heat be conducted into the center of a turkey. That's why meat that is undercooked or rare is cooked on the outside but pink or red in the center.

It makes sense, then, that it is the size of the turkey that determines how long it will take to cook the bird. As the size increases, the outside area which is exposed to the heat of the oven gets larger, and the heat has farther to go to reach the center. But here's where it could get confusing: a 24-pound turkey is twice as heavy as a 12-pound turkey, so it should take twice as long to cook, right?

Wrong! If you consult a standard cookbook, you will find that the bigger bird does take longer to cook, but not twice as long as the smaller bird. Again, the answer can be explained by physics.

The heavier and bigger the turkey, the farther the heat must travel to reach the center. However, the bigger turkey also has a larger surface area presented to the source of the heat. The larger surface area allows more heat to enter the bird which more than makes up for the increased distance the heat must travel to the center. This results in an increase in cooking time for the 24-pound bird which is approximately 1.6 times as long (not twice as long) as the time to cook the 12-pound bird. (I say "approximately" here because my estimate was based on a spherical turkey, and we all know that turkeys aren't spherical!)

Even with this knowledge, turkey weights and oven temperatures vary so much that I use the time ranges for roasting that are listed in my cookbook as a general guide. To be sure that the meat is cooked to the required temperature of 180 degrees Fahrenheit, I use a meat thermometer inserted between the thigh and breast – in the thickest part of the turkey, but not touching a bone.

So as you prepare your Thanksgiving dinner, remember: what is happening within your oven is an example of one of the many interesting principles of physics in action.

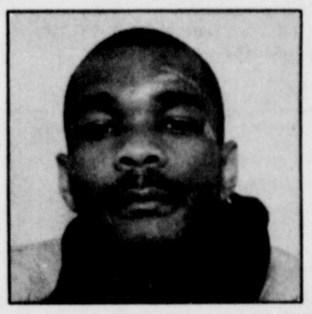

Dr. Grant is a retired professor of physics from Denison University who took over the kitchen from his wife in 1991. He is now using his love of cooking to motivate students to learn more about the wonders of physics.

West Sac Christmas Basket Program fires up

From the West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project

The West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project is a Christmastime distribution of donated food to the needy families of West Sacramento.

"Baskets" of food are tailored to family size to see that all have plenty to eat. Families register during the month of December ahead of distribution so enough food can be planned to serve anyone who signs up. Need is determined if the family is able to provide proof of public assistance (A.F.D.C., Food Stamps), SSI, SSA, etc., or low income.

The project is conducted annually by a coalition of religious groups, community organizations, business firms and concerned individuals in West Sacramento. It is a nonprofit corporation whose board of directors is drawn from these local citizens and service organizations, church and civic leaders and business representatives. The 1998 project officers are: Helena Helmold, chairperson; Linda Dawson, secretary; and Bob Moos, treasurer. Approximately 15 people comprise the board, including the officers.

The project began in December, 1969, as several local people and church workers responded to food needs of local residents by providing "baskets" of food to make a good Christmas dinner. This work remained small in size for several years, but began to grow in the late 1970s to its families each Christmas. This represents more than 3,000 people in the community each year who enjoy a good Christmas dinner with all the trimmings. In 1997, it was 2,982 people. The approximate cost of a Christmas basket for a family of four is $25.00. The needs are met by donations of food, services, and cash from businesses, churches, individuals, and groups. Any extra funds and food at the end of each year's project are channeled into the local food closet system.

While food is the more critical item, many people want also to give toys to the children of these needy families. Thus, a toy giveaway operates alongside the project each year. Recent experience is that over 1,500 of those people receiving food are children who then also receive a toy.

Your participation is encouraged this Christmas season.

Providing presents for children of prisoners

From First Baptist Church

For its seventh year, First Baptist Church is participating in the "Angel Tree" ministry of Charles Colson's international organization, Prison Fellowship. Through "Angel Tree," Christmas gifts are provided to West Sacramento children whose lives are torn by the reality of a parent in prison (each gift is given on behalf of the absent parent). The children's "at-home" partner or guardian is contacted to find out what they might need or want for Christmas, and one clothing wish and one toy wish are granted per child (usually the families are very needy and the requests very basic). Each wish is then written on a paper angel and put on a Christmas tree, hence the name "Angel Tree."

Individuals, groups or businesses are then asked to purchase a child's gift wish (it is requested that sponsors keep the value of the gifts about $20.00, in order that their value be consistent), and once the gifts are collected they are presented to the children on behalf of the parent in prison. This year, the gifts will be distributed at a "Happy Birthday Jesus" celebration on Friday, Dec. 11, where the families will gather together for dinner and an evening celebrating Christmas -- with stories, songs and laughter. After the party, each inmate is sent a Christmas greeting that includes details of the gift given (from them) and a picture of their family taken at the party.

This year, requests for over 150 West Sacramento children have been received by the church, with the expectation of increasing that number as applications are forwarded from the Prison Fellowship office. The church is asking that individuals, businesses, churches or any other interested group, consider either donating money for a gift (we will shop for you), or sponsoring specific gift wishes. The smile on a child's face, the building of bridges in broken family relationships, and a bright spot in what probably would have been a lonely and empty Christmas season will make it worth every moment and every dollar.

If you are interested in helping make Christmas a reality for these children, an "Angel Tree" will be set up outside MacFrugal's at 1270 West Capitol Avenue on Friday, Nov. 27, from 7:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Help in any form would be appreciated.

For further information, contact the First Baptist Church at 371-4061.
